LOAN FUND BALL

One of the most gratifying things of the entire year is to see how classmates are lining up behind the loan fund drive. Not only are they giving their support by purchasing a ticket, but a great many are spending their time and energy in the furtherance of the work.

The loan fund ball sponsored by the sophomore class of each year has at last found the swelling of a fund which is used exclusively for the purpose of aiding students who are in need of money to complete or further their education.

The sophomore loan fund is a revolving affair, once a dollar is added it always stays with the fund, aiding needy students and at the same time accumulating interest which is added to the fund.

Too much credit cannot be given to those who are giving their time and energy for the work. At the present time indications are that the fund will be swollen by at least five hundred dollars, thus helping more to obtain aid.

The dollar collected from each student hardly tells, but the corresponding aid to those that appreciate it.

If you haven't already got your ticket do it now. Are you holding up your share? —The Editor

A small cry amid the din of victories of past and future, on the field and floor, a small cry for help. Unlabeled in the bold headlines of the sports page, with no glaring picture of a victorious athlete, the little cry of debaters preparing to swing into action almost unnoticed.

Young University backed by traditions of the best, now stands upon the verge of one of its greatest triumphs in the history of the institution. Yet interest in the most instructive and fascinating of all college sports is located on the way. Interest is awakened in the more sensational activities.

There are great things to be done in the field of debate. There are words to be conquered. This season finds more letter men and more promising material than ever before in the harness, but they cannot carry on to victory and honor for the White and Blue without your support.

Let's put Young University over the top for the best year in its debating history.

Within the past few weeks our hearts have been gladdened and our paths made easier by the laying of a coat of gravel on the popular sport from first cast to seventh north. This improvement, which has long been needed, has materially aided us in getting to and from classes on the hall. The man who is responsible for it deserves to be commended.

However, the act draws our attention once more to a condition existing at the foot of the hill that can and should be remedied. If the authorities really want to aid us, they should take cognizance of the fact that we never start out to classes on the hill or on their way with any assurance of reaching our destination. It is true that no one has been hurt as yet, but the "breaks of the game" can't be for the pedestrian all the time. As the school grows so does the danger.

All though the danger exists, though, we should think the faculty members would remedy the situation to save their own dignity for the only good side to the situation from the student's view point is the spectacle presented by some game professors scurrying to safety on the other side of the street like a rabbit running to the shelter of a convenient bush.

OPINIONS

There have been many substantial and morning paragraphs. (Omission) using the opinions of the holder and probably less intelligent members of the faculty. The faculty, stadium problems and other more important portions of the university have been slanted, slanted, and slanted for different and various reasons. In or out to be different and slanted for the spirit of Thanksgiving, I shall attempt to air a few views on the numerous things we have to be thankful for up to this day and date. But remember, this is not a dissertation on La Dine or Grecia (Whom) but is honest opinion on the basis of (A) of them are not in the freshman class of the good old H. Y. U. By the way, the word, or term, "basics" need not apply to the ladies alone, but may also include Kris Lavin and "Chag" Vacher. Include these men for no other reason than to make the general class of students thankful that we couldn't name them all.

We have in our assemblies approximately fifteen hundred students, fifteen hundred and one including myself. Think of your first opportunity to be thankful—thankful that there are no more. Look over the faculty members and don't shout until you see the white of their eyes. (They are usually asleep)—in fact, I'd say anyone to get their eyes five minutes after they have been seated in their seats in assemblies. Perhaps they hang their heads in shame, if so, I forgive them. We all should be thankful for our student body president. The girls should appreciate the fact that he is married and they won't have to fight over him. The boys should offer up the gratitude of their hearty thanks for the girls who are not their girls. And the faculty! Sophomores are glad that there are no more than there are in the class. They are all right, though, if the girls are good looking as well as the boys. They are all good sports, may be even have them both, while they are dumb, but, anyway, we won't have a look in when they get wiser.

We have in all the students will mind their business and the faculty will, we will progress, providing, of course, that the "Y" News editor stays away from the gettysburg women and the Brighton Editor stays away from the blondes—and my girl.

Brigham Young Has Hectic Time

Brigham Young U. gained a great deal of praise Saturday in holding the Utah U. to a 5-0 score, but not any more than it deserves. The Cougar got an entire "break" even before the game started, says John Jordan, an athlete from Provo, who was a Cougar traveler from Provo to Salt Lake City by bus. Shortly after they left Provo a terrific snowstorm broke and they had to get out and push on several occasions. "I was not but didn't get under way until 3:10 some time," Jordan says. "I was not but didn't get under way until 3:10 some time," Jordan says. "I was not but didn't get under way until 3:10 some time," Jordan says.
